The REME Halo™ whole-home air purifier from RGF® Environmental Group Inc. has earned a reputation among contractors not only for its ability to improve IAQ, but also for its ease of installation and stellar customer support. One judge said the product's ease of maintenance has "greatly improved over previous models," while another judge called this year's IAQ Dealer Design Awards winner an "excellent product" that is "easy to install and works great."

"It works," said Chris Staley, head HVAC service technician for Regal Inc. in York, Pennsylvania. "With this product, I guarantee customers will notice a difference in their IAQ. The higher kill rates lets my customers be confident they are protected against bacteria, viruses, mold spores, VOCs [volatile organic compounds], and odors. The ion generator is a great add-on to help attract allergens, dust, and dirt to further filter indoor air, which assures the air is clean."

The REME Halo™ provides a patented technology of hydro-peroxides that proactively kills bacteria, mold, and viruses in the air and on surfaces while also reducing odors, smoke, VOCs, and particulates by 99 percent. This product also offers first-in-its-class, environmentally friendly packaging. Other features include a quick-release housing and cell for fast installation and no tool maintenance, an adjustable shroud that offers variable output control for the amount of hydro-peroxides being emitted, and dual ion generator emitters for increased bipolar ion output.

Lisa Bailey, sales coordinator at RGF Environmental, said the company took contractor and release and no-tools features for both the unit disassembly and the cell replacement were created."

David Sansone, owner of Sansone Air Conditioning in Deerfield Beach, Florida, said the REME Halo™ "has been a welcome addition" to his line of IAQ products.

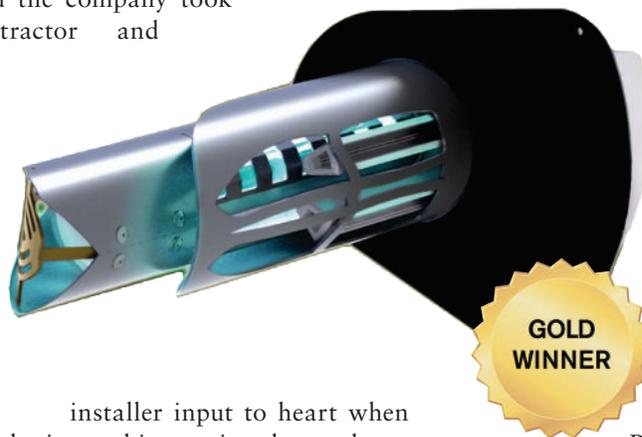

"We've used the REME Halo™ since it was first introduced, and we've been a dealer of RGF products for around seven years," he said. "I think it does an excellent job killing airborne pollutants and removing particles from the air."

In addition to product effectiveness and reliability, RGF's customer support is beyond compare, Staley said. "RGF gives you all the resources you need to sell this product — from YouTube commercials to brochures, RGF delivers."

Lisa Bailey said RGF Environmental is pleased to be a gold winner in this year's Dealer Design Awards and will continue to work closely with the contractors who use the company's products.

"We value our relationship with our contractors and strive to design products that are installer-friendly," she said. "If we make their jobs easier, we become an even more valued partner to them."

installer input to heart when developing and improving the product.

"We are always open to and actually seek contractor feedback on our products, and we take their suggestions and use them for both upgrading our existing products and also as a tool for new product development," she said. "When developing this product, our engineers specifically focused on the feedback from the field requesting easier and faster installation and service times. As a result of this input, the quick-
